ADDITIONAL RESOURCES

DisBeat: <https://www.facebook.com/ADALegacy/>

What is it: DisBeat is a national communications initiative that reaches out to communities to keep them updated on disability issues, actions and events.

Disability Visibility Project <https://disabilityvisibilityproject.com/>

(From the website): The Disability Visibility Project (DVP)™ is an online community dedicated to recording, amplifying, and sharing disability stories and culture. The DVP is also a community partnership with StoryCorps, a national oral history organization. Our aim is to create disabled media that is intersectional, multi-modal, and accessible. For any questions or comments, contact Alice Wong, Founder and Project Coordinator: DisabilityVisibilityProject@gmail.com banner that is always visible. (From the website): The Live On Movement is a disability-led project for people with disabilities to see how worthwhile life is. Life can be hard sometimes, and this is even more true for people living with disabilities. Young people with disabilities face bullying, youth and adults with disabilities can be forced into nursing facilities, and plenty of people and businesses still discriminate against us every day. Whether you were born with your disability, your disability has slowly progressed as you grew older, or you suddenly acquired your disability, the challenges you face are real. But you can get through them!..... The Live On Movement was created to show people with disabilities the incredible lives they can lead, and all they need to do right now is choose to Live On.

Live On: www.liveon.net There is a “Contact” link on the home page

Organizer's Forum: www.ndla.org A resource for disability organizers where the goal is to build the organizing capacity of the disability community across the country. The forum works to support community organizers in the disability community, share tips and tools to do our work more effectively, and provide organizers a sounding board and community for this work. The Organizer's Forum is supported by the Organizing Workgroup of the National Disability Leadership Alliance. To sign up and participate in calls or for additional info about who will be speaking on the calls, please check out the Organizer's Forum tab on www.ndla.org website. Click here for information on past and future calls. freeconferencecall.com is used and will allow people who don't have long distance to join through their computers.
